Election (in)security

"The biggest threats to election security in the United States today remain largely the same as they were in 2020 and 2022, chief technology officer at The Elections Group Trevor Timmons tells MC — with the ever-present risk of foreign and domestic disinformation campaigns and cyberattacks. But there are some significant new differences too."

— Election officials: One of the biggest differences Timmons notices is the large loss of both federal and state election officials following previous chaotic elections, which could hurt the country's ability to respond to threats.
